DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

1. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

2. Claims 3-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the disclosed invention is possibly inoperative and therefore lacks utility. Noted that the received signal strength is usually in the range of a few dBm. The transmitted power strength is usually in the range of a few dB to a few hundred dB. Thus the current required to operate the transmitter is much higher than the current obtained from the RSSI alone. Therefore, the current obtained from the RSSI is insufficient to power the transmitter.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1-2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Peterzell (US 2002/0123319A1) in view of Durkota et al (5,396,255).

Consider claims 1-2. Peterzell teaches a radio communication system for communication between a first mobile system (e.g., any mobile system that transmits a signal to the second mobile system) and a second mobile system (transceiver 800), comprising a received signal strength detecting device for detecting a received signal strength of the transceiver in the second mobile system (RSSI 927, fig(s). 9); a power controller for controlling a transmitted power strength status and controlling transmitted power of the transceiver in the second mobile system according to the received signal strength (page(s) 9, ¶ 0099). Peterzell does not clearly teach an indicating device for receiving the transmitted power strength status and indicating a transmitted RF power strength status of the transceiver in the second mobile system.

Durkota teaches an indicating device for receiving the transmitted power strength status and indicating a transmitted RF power strength status of the transceiver in the second mobile system (watt-meter 112 of transceiver 105, fig(s) 2; column(s) 4, line(s) 33-52) for the purposes of providing a graphical display of antenna signal strength versus antenna altitude for determining the optimum altitude for antenna pattern measurements, and calculation of antenna isotropic is provided for verification of antenna performance (column(s) 3, line(s) 3-9).

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to utilize the teachings of Durkota into the teachings of Peterzell for the purposes mentioned above.
